JURY DUTY

... is not only expensive to the American taxpayer, it also is a "drag" to many of the approximately 2,000,000 persons called for

Hundreds of these two million live in Medina County, and many of them have added their voices to the ever-growing refrain "something ought to be done."

The number of persons called for jury duty has taken a dramatic jump since two years ago. That's when the jury wheel went into use as the method by which potential jurors are

"We have to draw many more names than we previously did," County Judge Jerome Decker said. "This is necessary to have enough jurors to serve on the cases. We cannot screen the names, even if we know a person is over age, ill, has small children. They have to be notified." The increased number has also boosted the county's juror cost by at least a thousand dollars in the past two years.

County residents are concerned on several accounts: First, they wonder why their name has to go back in the wheel once they have done "their civic duty" on a case; secondly, they want to know why they have to go and "sit around" while everyone apparently "does nothing"; and thirdly, they are puzzled when the court has a full venire present and after the jury for one case is called and that case is dismissed or postponed everyone goes home and no other trials are tried.

One woman I know recently pulled jury duty about three times in one month, with that "sit and wait" treatment and then given "come back tomorrow" advice.

A recent survey made by the Law Enforcement Assistance Administration claims local courts over the nation waste $50 million a year by summoning too many citizens for jury duty and forcing them to wait long hours with nothing to do.

Such inefficiency frustrates and angers many citizens called for jury duty, the study showed.

"Wasting juror's time is a clear cut example of the criminal justice system's indifference to the needs of the citizen," said LEAA Administrator Donald E. Santarelli. "More efficient court tions can make jury service more attractive and meaningful to those who serve." The survey sounds identical to what local people have told me. It said many citizens summoned for jury duty are distressed at being told to report to the courthouse daily and then forced to while away the time in a dingy lounge, hallway or room until they are finally selected for a trial or dismissed. I would hope that local officials would heed the advice of LEAA research director Gerald Chapin and do something about the situation. He said: "Citizens have a right to demand that the courts follow a reasonable time schedule. Why should jurors be called hours before they are needed?" I feel even stronger than Chapin. It is another concession to the criminal when an ordinary citizens is summoned-and most times he has no recourse but to go-and is actually treated worse than the person on trial. Most Americans do not object to serving on a jury, or even being called. But they do object streneously to getting called and forced to sit on their thumbs while some defense attorney fiddle-faddles around doing everything he can do to get his client's case dismissed.

Or while a court tries to come out of a cloud of confusion and create order enough so that "justice may be served."

COULD IT BE TRUE

. . . the story I heard the other day?

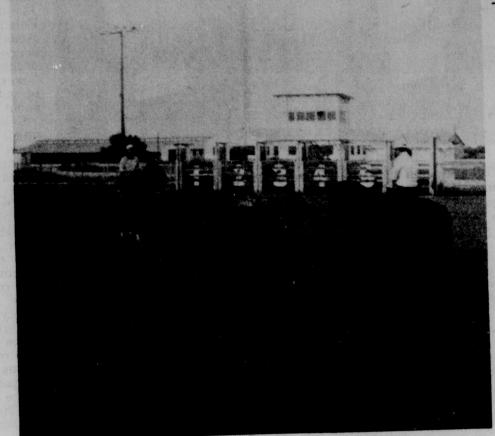

It seems there was a train-car accident close to here last week. The story told me said these two men had imbibed [allegedly] just some of the brew of the hops, better known around here as German Sodawater, and were on their way to Hondo.

They made a turn somewhere east of town and as they crossed the railroad track it seemed to jar them into the realization they were headed wrong. So, they made amends and turned, but down the railroad tracks.

Now way down the way train was approaching and an alert engineer saw the headlights. Realizing they shouldn't be there, he stopped.

But, the story goes, the men didn't. They tangled headon with No one was hurt, so I can say I sure would have loved to see

Outcome of the Texas Railroad Commission hearing going on in Austin this week certainly could affect the economy of the Hondo and D'Hanis area.

Both Universal Rundle of Hondo and D'Hanis Brick & Tile Co. are among customers of the LoVoca Distributing Co., natural gas suppliers. And the City of Hondo purchases electric from San

This would mean that these cities, and in the case of San Antonio this brings it down the road to Hondo, would pay more for fuel oil and get less natural gas. Since the cost of fuel oil is much higher than natural gas, it would mean higher electric bills--and possibly brown out periods since the fuel oil supply is limited.

With increased production and harvesting costs for hay this year, produc-ers in Medina County should do everything pos-sible to make certain their

hay is of high quality.

Glenn Bragg, county agent for the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, lists two main factors for producing high quality hay: high rates of fertilization and harvesting at an early stage of growth.

Fertilizer is a major cost for producing high quality hay. Due to increased costs and limited supplies of fertilizer, each producer should make a special effort to utilize fertilizer efficiently by harvesting hay at the correct stage of growth.

As hay crops begin to mature, quality begins to decline, points out Bragg. Most hay crops should be harvested before seed heads begin to form. Plants like Coastal bermudagrass, which produce no seed heads, should be harvested at 28-30 days of growth. Costs for fuel, equipment, wire, twine and other inputs have also increased considerably during the past year, thus raising harvest expenses. In addition, many of these items are in limited supply. This makes it all the more important to harvest high quality hay, emphasizes Bragg. Examine sorghum fields----

Medina County grain sorghum producers are presently receiving some loss to sorghum midge, according to Glenn Bragg, County Extension Agent. Field inspections indicate that sorghum midge have increased in high enough populations to cause some economic loss in certain grain sorghum fields.

The adult midge, an orange colored looking gnat or tly, is about 1/12 inch long. Eggs are deposited by the female in the blooming sorghum florets and the small maggot feeds on and consumes the developing seed. Once the florets turn from yellow to orange the midge will no longer damage that particular grain, says Bragg.

Adults usually are most active during the morning and evening hours, there-fore, fields inspections should be made in the early mornings or late evening hours of the day.

Once the midge popula-tion has reached approximately 3 per head, sorghum blooming after that date has little chance of escaping extensive damage unless insecticides are used.

Timing of spray applications are of utmost importance. Generally 2 to 3 spray applications at 3-5 day intervals are necessary to obtain adequate control.

Additional information on control and identification of sorghum midge can be obtained from the local County Extension Office.

Outcome of the Texas Railroad Commission hearing going on in Austin this week certainly could affect the economy of the Hondo and D'Hanis area.

Both Universal Rundle of Hondo and D'Hanis Brick & Tile Co. are among customers of the LoVoca Distributing Co., natural gas suppliers. And the City of Hondo purchases electric from San Antonio, another big consumer. Lo-Voca has requested the Railroad Commission to set an entire new priority on gas distribution. The company wants utilities producing electrical power, like San Antonio, Austin and Corpus Christi, to move to the bottom of the list of priorities.

Final certification date is July 15.

This would mean that these cities, and in the case of San Antonio this brings it down the road to Hondo, would pay more for fuel oil and get less natural gas. Since the cost of fuel oil is much higher than natural gas, it would mean higher electric bills--and possibly brown out periods since the fuel oil supply is limited.

Universal Rundle and D'Hanis Brick & Tile are industrial users. They will be affected by any curtailment authority the Commission might grant Lo-Voca.

Harvest high quality hay Hondo Anvil Herald, Thursday, June 6, 1974. Page 3

With increased production and harvesting costs for hay this year, produc-ers in Medina County should do everything pos-sible to make certain their

hay is of high quality.

Glenn Bragg, county agent for the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, lists two main factors for producing high quality hay: high rates of fertilization and harvesting at an early stage of growth.

Fertilizer is a major cost for producing high quality hay. Due to increased costs and limited supplies of fertilizer, each producer should make a special effort to utilize fertilizer efficiently by harvesting hay at the correct stage of growth.

As hay crops begin to mature, quality begins to decline, points out Bragg. Most hay crops should be harvested before seed heads begin to form. Plants like Coastal bermudagrass, which produce no seed heads, should be harvested at 28-30 days of growth. Costs for fuel, equipment, wire, twine and other inputs have also increased considerably during the past year, thus raising harvest expenses. In addition, many of these items are in limited supply. This makes it all the more important to harvest high quality hay, emphasizes Bragg. Examine sorghum fields--

Medina County grain sorghum producers are presently receiving some loss to sorghum midge, according to Glenn Bragg, County Extension Agent. Field inspections indicate that sorghum midge have increased in high enough populations to cause some economic loss in certain grain sorghum fields. The adult midge, an orange colored looking gnat or tly, is about 1/12 inch long. Eggs are deposited by the female in the blooming sorghum florets and the small maggot feeds on and consumes the developing seed. Once the florets turn from yellow to orange the midge will no longer damage that particular grain, says Bragg.

Adults usually are most active during the morning and evening hours, therefore, fields inspections should be made in the early mornings or late evening hours of the day.

Once the midge population has reached approximately 3 per head, sorghum blooming after that date has little chance escaping extensive damage unless insecticides are used.

Timing of spray applica-tions are of utmost importance. Generally 2 to 3 spray applications at 3-5 day intervals are necessary to obtain adequate control.

Additional information on control and identification of sorghum midge can be obtained from the local County Extension Office.

Now they are predators making headlines in many parts of the U.S. The for and against arguments continue to mount - and did you know that South Dakota is nicknamed the Coyote State?

It amazed me to read [AH 4/4/74] that the wild creatures are taking a look-see at life in the city, as reported with pictorial proof, by FLOYD BADER, 309

22nd Street. Environmentalists, with good intentions, argue the point about any damage the coyotes do. Cattle and sheep producers take a dim view of this and offer their own experiences as evidence of the destruction wrought. I read the report [AH 5/16] about "Full house hears coyote program." It will be interesting [and perhaps furnish proof-positive] when the results of the M-44 coyote killing device experiment are released.

CHOOSING A PHARMACY REQUIRES THOUGHT

There's nothing like a June wedding, so the saying goes. If you are a June bride (or even a May bride) or any kind of bride and just setting up housekeeping, we know you are in the middle of loads of important decisions. You are trying to get everything off to a good start and want to choose things carefully. Choosing a pharmacy is certainly something to be given careful thought.

It's important to know that any prescriptions you need to have filled will be correctly handled and any specific instructions for deriving the full benefit of your medication will explained. We will gladly order any hardto-find item for you.

Work can be dangerous to your health ice says that every year cals, nearly all of which 100,000 workers die from are untested for possible on-the-job exposure. The deaths are caused from exposure to poisonous chemicals, dusts, noise, heat, cold, radiation, and other conditions at work. In addition, the PHS estimates that 390,-000 more workers develop disabling occupational diseases. And countless thousands succumb to still other job-related diseases that have not even been specified by scientists yet.

Among the known dangers, exposure to coal dust, asbestos, cotton fibers, as well as metals like beryllium and dusts like silica cause severe lung disease. When workers in coal mines and asbestos installation also smoke cigarettes, their rates of crippling lung disease sky rocket.

Although an occupational health law was passed in 1970, enforceable federal standards to protect workers exist for only 450 of the suspected 15,000 substances which may injure a worker's health. Each year industry introduces

The Public Health Serv- another 400 new chemilong-term affects on workers who handle and inhale them. There is almost no testing at all of combinations of substances that may be harmless by themselves but become deadly when combined.

In thousands of plants, workers do not even know what chemicals they work with; to protect trade secrets, companies keep records of the substances only by code numbers. Unless a federal safety standard exists for the chemical, the company is not required to monitor worker exposure to poisonous agents or to perform periodic medical examinations on those exposed.
